DETAILED ACTION

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 18 and 21 rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Rowe et al (US 5,612,050).

Rowe teaches a device for administering a tissue adhesive, the device having suction channels that terminate at the distal end of the device for removing excess adhesive from the treatment site. (Col. 12, lines 51-65).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 22, 25, and 27 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rowe et al.

Rowe teaches all the claimed subject matter except for an explicit teaching that excess glue is removed from the treatment surface. However, since the suction may not necessarily be turned on throughout the procedure (col. 12, lines 64-65), it is possible for excess glue to end up on the surface, in which case it would have been obvious to use the suction channel to remove the excess glue from the treatment surface.

Claims 19, 20, 23, 24, and 28-37 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Rowe in view of Miller et al (US 4,874,368).

Rowe teaches all the claimed subject matter except for an explicit teaching that excess glue is removed from the treatment surface (see discussion above). Rowe also lacks a teaching of a multiple component adhesive. Miller teaches the well-known use of a multi-component fibrin adhesive for use on tissue, along with the applicator for such an adhesive. It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to combine the teachings of Rowe and Miller and remove excess multi-component adhesive from a treatment surface. Similarly, suction is well-known to be used prior to adhesive application to clear the treatment site, and as such would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art.
